COLUMBUS FISHING EXPO EXPANDING, MOVING TO LARGER FACILITY

2017 Columbus Fishing Expo moving to 155,000 sqft. Building at Ohio Expo Center

COLUMBUS, OH – The Columbus Fishing Expo will be returning in February of 2017 to the Ohio Expo Center, with one major change, square footage. In response to capacity crowds at their 2016 event the Fishing Expo will be moving to the 155,000 square foot Bricker Building, which also hosts the annual Columbus Home and Garden Show as well as the Deer and Turkey Expo.

Attendees to the expanded event will still see crowd favorites like the “Hawg” Trough, Fly Casting Area, boat displays and the Midwest’s most unique tackle and gear, but will also be treated to new additions like the Ultimate Kids Zone and The Great American Fish Fry as well as more interactive exhibits an expanded seminar and speaker schedule and over 150 additional vendors.

Show presenter David Hoheisel is excited about the continued growth of the event. “Our 2016 show was fantastic, the support for this type of event has been overwhelming. We are excited to expand the show and share our love of bringing families together around fishing and the great outdoors with an even larger audience.”

ABOUT THE EXPO: The Columbus Fishing Expo is returning for its third year to the Ohio Expo Center in Columbus. The event, taking place February 10th 12th, 2017, promises to bring thousands anglers and outdoor enthusiasts to Columbus. Centered around education and family the Expo boast over 60 seminars and interactive exhibits along with tackle, gear, boats and outfitters in over 155,000 square feet.
